

I am a mom looking to take my kids on vacation this summer. We are looking for either a city where we could be tourists for about a week, but I have already been to both New York and Chicago, so I want to find somewhere new to travel to. I am looking to go from July 20-27. I have heard about this website from a few friends so I am going to try using it to search for places to go.

I head to the website and it asks me to log in first before I am able to search. I put in my email and make a password, and then it also makes me do an authentication which I also completed. Now I am going to go to the search page. I put in my dates and for weather, I only care about the temperature and that it doesn't rain. I cannot specify the no rain part of the weather, so I just put in the temperature range which for me is 60-80 degrees, because I know that it is summer and most places will be pretty hot, but I don't want it to be too hot to the point where I am going to get warm beach vacations in my search.

I click search and I see so many new places that I could travel to with my kids, as well as the prices for flights to each place which is very helpful because I obviously would like to not spend too much money on my vacation. I have chosen San Francisco based off my search and I am very grateful for this website for giving me new ideas of places to travel and explore with my kids!
